THE OXSID – AUSCI DEBATE 2018

30 NOVEMBER 2018 | SOEHANNA HALL

President's Welcome

We'd gather tonight in solidarity with our Brothers and Sisters who suffered from recent earthquakes in Palu, Donggala, and surrounding areas. Such initiative is indeed important for us as private citizens to complement the work which can't be covered by our government, especially in humanitarian sector. We must be able to transform our middle class to become a true civil society. A country with a strong civil society will have the blatant capability to enhance itself to the advancement of Indonesia.

I thank Alumni of The University of Southern California-Indonesia (AUSCI) for accepting our invitation to do tonight's debate with us. Truly, it is not about winning or losing. Tonight, we prove that our educational institutions are not merely intellectual factories, but rather points of departure for us to embark to the furtherance of nation building. I am indeed grateful that The University of Oxford Society of Indonesia is partnering with AUSCI. Despite our more than 900 years of educational history, I must admit that we have so much to learn from AUSCI. After all, the only way for a young person to rise is to illuminate and enhance himself/herself every day he/she can.

President

The University of Oxford
Society of Indonesia

"One small step for man, one giant leap for mankind," Neil Armstrong (USC '70).

We are grateful for the Oxford Society of Indonesia's invitation to participate in tonight's debate, as it is another forward step in the relations between alumni of foreign universities.

Tonight's event is a reminder that no matter where we get our educations from, it is better when we combine and work our minds together. The recent tragedy at Palu-Donggala looms large as our backdrop and serve as a reminder that we are not alone, and that we can do more for others.

AUSCI (Alumni of USC Indonesia) believes strongly in the value of networking; and tonight, is the time for us to do just that: build our network, learn from each other, and, hopefully, by the end of the evening, we would have become a slightly better version of ourselves. Improving oneself will facilitate a fruitful meeting of the minds, which eventually will enable us to make that giant leap together, if not for mankind, perhaps at least for Indonesia.

My fellow Trojans and I look forward to meeting and learning from all of you throughout this evening and beyond.

Fight On!

Charity Organization YPO & Habitat for Humanity

In the light of recent Palu, Sigi, and Donggala tsunami disaster, the OXSID and AUSCI are taking initiatives to raise fund for victims by donating all profits from this event to build Transitional Shelters for affected families. The T-Shelters project initiated by the Habitat for Humanity Indonesia aims to build as many as 4,000 units in disaster-affected areas in Central Sulawesi.

Transitional shelter provides a habitable covered living space and a secure, healthy living environment, with privacy and dignity, to those within it, during the period between a conflict or natural disaster and the achievement of a durable shelter solution.

The shelter should be durable enough to last the entire transition period, until reconstruction is complete, and should be able to be upgraded or relocated to different sites. It should use simple techniques and rapid construction methods appropriate to the environment and community with which it is being implemented.

It has been successfully implemented during 2006 Yogyakarta earthquake.

This charity event will serve as joint effort together with the Young Presidents' Organization (YPO) to build 265 units which will be constructed for the communities of Poi Village, South Dolo District in the Region of Sigi, Central Sulawesi Province. One 18-sqm unit is estimated to cost IDR 25 Million (approximately USD 1,800).
